ASSA ABLOY Announces Integration of IP-Enabled Access Control Locks with Matrix Systems

NEW HAVEN, Connecticut, December 8, 2020 – ASSA ABLOY Opening Solutions today announced the integration of its IP-enabled PoE (Power over Ethernet) and Intelligent WiFi access control locks with the Frontier Integrated Platform from Matrix Systems, a leader in the enterprise access control industry.

Bruce Rogoff, CEO of Matrix Systems, stated, “The ASSA ABLOY integration furthers our commitment to open platforms and helping customers secure even more of their facilities.” He added, “Partnering with ASSA ABLOY gives Matrix the ability to help lower access control costs to the enterprise organizations we serve across the country.”

The IP integration offers end-users more options for expanding their physical security system easily and affordably using IP-enabled locks from ASSA ABLOY Group brands Corbin Russwin and SARGENT. The IP-enabled range include locks that connect to a host system through an existing 802.11b/g/n WiFi network. The range also includes IEEE 802.3af compliant Power over Ethernet (PoE) locks that connect to the Local Area Network (LAN) utilizing a single Ethernet cable for both power and data.

The Frontier Integrated Platform by Matrix Systems provides unparalleled redundancy and reliability to organizations where security is mission critical. Matrix customers include some of the nation’s top airports, universities and healthcare systems. Matrix offers products that are reliable and practical, solutions that are innovative and comprehensive, and built in the U.S.

“The Matrix commitment to delivering the precise level of security an organization needs is an excellent fit for ASSA ABLOY,” stated Mark Duato, Executive Vice President, Aftermarket, ASSA ABLOY Opening Solutions Americas. “The integration with our IP-enabled technology supports that commitment with a solution that makes it easier and more affordable to expand access control deeper into a facility.”
